

The Terrill Scholarship

Terrill A. Mast, Ph.D., died from a brain tumor after living seven years with the affects of a brain injury. Terry devoted his entire career to educating in a way that taught us all how to learn. From the early days of teaching machines, his semester as 7th grade math teacher, his mastery of educational goals and objectives, to his last days of problem-based learning and co-founder and editor of Teaching and Learning in Medicine, Terry inspired others with his deep intellect, his integrity and his love of learning.

Terry's wife, Melinda is the executive director of the Brain Injury Association of Kentucky. As director, she supports others living with brain injury, implementing the lessons she learned from Terry, and those whose lives he touched.
